IRAQI UNDER SECRETARY ISMAT KITTANI'S
VISIT TO THE UNITED STATES [REDACTED]Summary

Ismat Kittani, one of three under secretaries in the Iraqi Foreign Ministry, will visit Washington beginning about 5 September to seek increased US efforts to bring an end to the war with Iran. Kittani will warn that Iraq will be forced to escalate military activity in the Gulf if the war continues. He will urge the US both to prevent third-country--especially Israeli--sales of US arms to Iran and to encourage increased Gulf state financial support for Iraq. [REDACTED]

Kittani will lobby to keep Iraq off the US list of countries supporting terrorism. He will portray Baghdad as part of the moderate Arab camp and minimize its ties with the USSR. His visit also may lay the groundwork for a trip to the US by Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz later this year. [REDACTED]

This memorandum was prepared by [REDACTED] Office of Near Eastern/South Asian Analysis, Persian Gulf Division/Iran-Iraq Branch. Comments are welcomed and may be addressed to the Chief, Persian Gulf Division [REDACTED]

Personal Background

Under Secretary Kittani is a [redacted] diplomat who is well disposed toward the West, especially the United States. He is an able spokesman for Iraqi foreign policy [redacted]

25X6

25X6

Kittani is well-acquainted with the American political system as a result of his nearly 20 years of service in the United Nations, culminating in his election as President of the UN General Assembly in September 1981. On leaving the UN post in September 1982 he assumed his present position in the Iraqi Foreign Ministry as Under Secretary for Multilateral Affairs. [redacted]

Kittani is 54 and has a B.A. degree in English and Political Science from Knox College in Galesburg, Illinois. Although he is a member of a prominent Kurdish family, he has supported the Iraqi regime rather than the Kurdish nationalist cause, believing there is little prospect of creating an independent Kurdistan. Kittani speaks Kurdish, French, and fluent English. He is divorced and has a son. [redacted]

IssuesIraq-Iran War

Kittani's primary message is likely to be that Iraq will escalate its attacks on Iranian oil targets in the Gulf if there is no substantial progress in bringing an end to the war. Iraqi officials have stressed to Western diplomats on numerous occasions in the past several weeks Baghdad's determination to expand the war. Iraq should be in a good position to launch attacks on oil tankers almost anywhere in the Persian Gulf by this fall when five French Super Etendard naval strike aircraft are scheduled to be delivered. [redacted]

-- Baghdad is relying on US fears that such a move could bring Iranian retaliation against Gulf oil facilities and force US involvement in the conflict. Iraq apparently hopes that superpower intervention would lead to a ceasefire and a reopening of the Gulf to Iraqi oil exports. [redacted]

25X1

Kittani also will try to move the US to encourage the Saudis and other Gulf Arabs to increase their financial support for Iraq. Baghdad recently has warned the Arab Gulf countries that it soon will escalate the war in the Gulf. Baghdad is using this threat in attempt to extract additional financial aid from its Arab supporters. We believe Iraq also wants the Gulf countries to urge the US and its Western allies to press Iran to come to the negotiating table. [redacted]

[REDACTED]

We believe Iraq will, in fact, step up its attacks in the Gulf if it cannot get sufficient financial aid to cover its foreign exchange shortfall. We project a $15 billion shortfall this year. Iraq has lined up only $5 billion in foreign exchange assistance so far and has virtually depleted its foreign exchange reserves. With no other revenue options, Baghdad already has had to make sharp import cuts this year and to defer about $4 billion in payments. [REDACTED]

Sales of US arms to Iraq and Iran

Kittani will argue that the US is not adhering to its professed neutrality in the war because it is acquiescing in black market sales of US arms to Iran, and in third-country sales--especially by Israel. He will argue that such sales are a primary reason Iran is able to continue the war.

- Kittani will not accept US claims that it cannot prevent such sales. He is likely to point out that the US has stopped almost all third-country transfers of US arms to Iraq, and may cite US prohibition of transfers from Egypt, Jordan, and Austria. [REDACTED]

The US has been successful in preventing most third-country transfers of US arms to Iran. As a result, Tehran has suffered from a chronic shortage of armor and spare parts for its aircraft, forcing it to rely primarily on infantry supported by artillery in its attacks on Iraq. Iran's major arms suppliers are North Korea, Libya, and Syria. [REDACTED]

UN Resolution

Kittani probably will press the US to support a UN resolution calling for a ceasefire in the war and imposing sanctions on the party--Iran--which refuses to comply. (S NF)

- The US has supported UN ceasefire resolutions on the war but has refused to support sanctions for non-compliance. [REDACTED]

Iraqi-US Ties

Kittani will hold out the possibility of improved ties between Iraq and the US after the war ends. He will argue that improving ties now would expose Iraq to charges of weakness by Iran and by Iraq's Arab enemies--Syria and Libya. [REDACTED]

- [REDACTED] remarks by Iraqi officials suggest the leadership has backed away from its previous insistence that the US revise its policies on Arab-Israeli issues as a prerequisite for the restoration of full diplomatic relations. [REDACTED]

Kittani probably will press for economic assistance. He may ask the US to increase the agricultural credits it granted to Baghdad this spring and may seek credit guarantees from the Export Import Bank. [REDACTED]

Kittani's discussions of diplomatic and trade ties may be intended to lay the groundwork for a visit later this year by Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz. The Iraqi Foreign Minister will attend the upcoming UN General Assembly session and may want to hold discussions with US officials as well. [REDACTED]

Terrorism

It pressed, Kittani will probably repeat the assurance on terrorism Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz gave to a Western diplomat in December 1982: "Iraq does not permit terrorist acts to be conducted from Iraqi territory." [REDACTED]

We believe Iraq has withdrawn its more obvious support for terrorist groups, but that it continues covert support to them.

Ties with the USSR

Kittani will downplay Iraq's ties with the Soviets. He will assert that Iraq continues its military dependence on Moscow because the USSR is the only country both willing and able to supply the weapons Iraq needs. [REDACTED]

-- Although Iraq has diversified its arms purchases since the late 1970s, Moscow remains Baghdad's major arms supplier. Most of the military equipment in Iraq's arsenal is of Soviet origin and the USSR has the largest group of military advisors in Iraq--approximately 1,000. [REDACTED]

25X1

Most of Iraq's economic trade, however, is with the West. Iraq imports only about 12 percent of its goods and services from the USSR and the Eastern bloc.

25X1

Iraqi Moderation and the Arab-Israeli Conflict

Kittani will argue that Iraq accepts the principles embodied in the Fez Peace Plan adopted at the September 1982 Arab League Summit. As a sign of Iraq's moderation in foreign affairs, Kittani will point to Baghdad's good relations with the Gulf states and Jordan and to the recent improvement in its ties with Egypt.

25X1

Once the Iraq-Iran war ends Baghdad will probably again take a harder line toward Israel, but will try to remain within the Arab consensus. Iraq will preserve its economic and political ties with Egypt and the conservative Arabs to counter continuing hostility from Iran and Syria.
